

Moon Festival:

The Moon Festival is one of the two most important holidays in the Chinese calendar (the other being the Chinese Lunar New Year). To the Chinese, this festival is similar to the American Thanksgiving holiday, celebrating a bountiful harvest. In Chicago Chinatown, the Moon Festival has been a well-known annual event for several years running. This festival traditionally celebrates the conclusion of the bountiful harvest season on the 15th day of the 8th lunar month when the moon appears to be the fullest and the brightest. Moon cakes are exchanged and the importance of family unity is reaffirmed. This is the reason why the Moon Festival is the second most celebrated and important event in the Chinese culture.
